A Hundred Years to Come.

BY MIL T. CHOVEF. O where will be this living show, A hundred years to come! Life's pomp and pride and beauty's glow,

A hundred years to come; The lips so red, love's life and bloom, Pale, pale and dead, laid in the tomb. The sun will gild the heavenly arch,

A lumified years to come; Life's sublice on Life's journey march, A hundred years to come; But we shall rest, our journey done,

And dust with dust, shall meet as one, The proud will sears, the sad will sigh-

A buildred years to come; The begger lay hun down to die, A hundred years to come;

Yet in the grave so still and deep. Shall all sink down in dramless sleep. The rackless plough shall pass above-A hundred years to come;

The resting place of those we love, A landred years to come: For head it we, mar shall we care, For we shall rest beside them there. No one will read-grow dim with rust-

A hundred years to come; The name engraven o'er our dust, A hundred years to come;

The dawy eye we loved before, Shall weep for us, no never more! Forgiveness.

There is something peculiarly sweet in p the enjoyment of that blessed sentiment, when we feel in our heart that we can, and do truly forgive an erring brother. When a product has erred by injuring us and afterwards comes to us with a clear tear in his eye, and with his heart full of contrite emotions, and acknowledges his fault and seeks our pardon for the errors of the past, it is a swee thing to grasp his hand with a friendly fervor and say, "Brather, with all friendly fervor and say, "Br a brother has erred by injuring us and alfriendly fervor and say, "Brother, with all my heart, thou art forgiven?"
